Chaucer's economic difficulties at this time would have been compounded by the termination of Philippa's annuity, last paid, as usual, into the "hand of Chaucer," on April 7, 1387. It was Philippa's annuity, but it represented a collective marital resource and, with her residence in Lincolnshire with her prosperous sister, it may have been partially available for her husband's use.

The Wool Men - Chaucer's Tale: 1386 and the Road to Canterbury

It must be difficult to find a topic about Geoffrey Chaucer that hasn't been exhausted. Paul Strohm has picked a pivotal year in Chaucer's life. In 1386 Chaucer lost his appointment as Controller of Customs of the wool trade. He was also more-or-less booted out of his lodgings of many years above Aldgate, London. Chaucer...
